

Rural Evidence Review

Local Evidence for Health Service Planning Through a Rural Lens

Centre for Rural Health Research rigorous evidence for sustainable rural health services

What is the Rural Evidence Review project?

The Rural Evidence Review project aims to work in collaboration with rural citizens and communities to provide robust, comprehensive and rural-relevant evidence to inform rural health service planning in British Columbia.

Who are we?

We are a team of researchers from the Centre for Rural Health Research, in the Department of Family Practice at the University of British Columbia.

How can you be involved?

We need your help to identify the rural health service issues and priorities that matter the most to rural communities in British Columbia.

Share Your Priorities.

(1) Take our survey. Please answer a few questions at the following link to share your health service priorities with the RER Team: tinyurl.com/y8dtbc3n

This brief and anonymous survey can be completed in 10 minutes or less!

(2) Contact us. Please contact the Project Coordinator at any time to discuss the issues and priorities that matter the most to you and your community.

Christine Carthew, Project Coordinator

T: (604) 827-2193 E: christine.carthew@ubc.ca